Dr. WILLIAM H. LONG

Known all over the country as "Diamond Jack" Dr. Long was born 1863 in Louisville, Ky. He became a printer and then a reporter on the Louisville Courier Journal. He left Louisville and went into show business and operated the Kensington (Pa.) Theater. At the same time he went to Camden (N.J.) and built the Camden Theater. In 1895 he took a degree of doctor of medicine in the Jefferson Medical College and began making his own medicine. He operated vaudeville and wild west shows to introduce his prescriptions and for about fifteen years traveled all over the country. At times he wore a diamond belt valued at $10,000 and his fingers were covered with gems. The original methods which Dr. Long used to advertise his medicine and the remarkable diamonds he wore kept him in the public eye for over a decade. He died in 1910. The above Pin-Back Button was made by Whitehead & Hoag, Newark, N.J.

FAREWELL TO PAPER FOOD STAMP COUPONS

David D. Gladfelter, NLG

The Food Stamp program is a joint Federal-State program to improve nutritional standards for America's low-income families and individuals. It began in 1961 with pilot programs in seven rural areas and one city, Detroit, based on the experience of the 1939-1943 surplus food distribution plan of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation and its successor agencies. The success of the pilot programs in improving the quality and quantity of the participants' diets and in expanding markets for livestock products, fruits and vegetables led to passage of the Food Stamp Act (Public Law 88-525) which was signed into law on August 31, 1964. Today, the program operates nationwide.

Eligible households participate in the program by purchasing an allotment of food stamps. The amount they pay (ranging from zero to a maximum of 30% of their net monthly income) is based on income and family size. Initially, the households received books of paper coupons in various denominations, which they redeemed at participating food stores for authorized food purchases. The food stores deposited the collected coupons in their bank accounts for credit, endorsing them on back. The banks handled the coupons like checks, clearing them through the various Federal Reserve banks. More recently, the food stamp benefits have been provided to participants by "paperless" electronic benefits transfer (EBT) cards, which are used like debit cards, the merchant deducting the amount of the purchase directly from the participant's food stamp account.

The Food Stamp program had an exonomic side. Until January 1, 1979, retail grocers gave change for the coupons in paper scrip or plastic tokens. Thereafter, merchants were required to make change in U. S. coins, and the food stamp change tokens and scrip went out of use. Collectors beat the bushes to find and assemble sets of the tokens and scrip before they disappeared altogether. A leader in this field of exonomia was Jerry F. Schimmel, of San Francisco, who published the Food Stamp Change Newsletter from 1980 to 1984. It circulated to a coterie of a few hundred exonomists. Our editor, Gary Patterson, published listings of New Jersey's food stamp tokens in Schimmel's newsletter and in the TAMS Journal.

On June 24, 2004, the Division of Family Development in the Department of Human Services, which administers the Food Stamp program in New Jersey, issued a directive calling for the elimination of the paper food stamp coupons. It stated, "We have been instructed by the United States Department of Agriculture/Food and Nutrition Service to initiate procedures to immediately destroy our existing inventory of food stamp coupons." It called for coupon closeout audits to be made, after which "all coupon inventory will then be sealed and transported to a State-approved destruction facility by an armored car service. The State auditors will be responsible for shredding the entire coupon inventory at the destruction facility."

Shown here are two canceled food stamp coupons of the "series 1971" with the imprint of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. When I saw these at a show I noticed the Beverly Bank "paid" cancellation and assumed this was the Beverly Bank in Burlington County, New Jersey (since absorbed by one of the megabanks). However, these coupons cleared through the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, which serves the northern parts of Illinois and Indiana, the Lower Peninsula of Michigan, southern Wisconsin and all of Iowa. The 1974 Rand McNally Road Atlas does not list any towns named Beverly in those states. The address of the merchant who deposited these coupons is on E. 39th St. There is no such address in Beverly, New Jersey. My best guess is that the coupons were used in Chicago and deposited in the Beverly Bank located at 103rd St. and Western Ave. in the Beverly Park neighborhood of Chicago. Similar food stamp coupons would have been used here.
